

A Blessing for Transfiguration Sunday Mark 9:2-9

There are glimpses
in the thin places between our worlds, where certainty gives way to something else entirely.

We want to linger in the warm glow of mystery, the soft hum of all being well,
because the view is fair, and the climb was all we had to offer.

But we do not glimpse the divine thanks to our own struggle or deserving.
It is revealed by grace for a moment, while we catch our breath and faith again.

Our figure is changed so that, when we turn back down the mountain, the glimpse might go with us and warm those still waiting at the bottom.
